° A resident of Greenville.

Although the publication of the extract may have been intended to dissipate western anxieties, it irritated Calhoun, for the editor had not consulted him before printing the letter. Green justified his action on the grounds that election time was drawing critically near and support of the West would be crucial for the Jackson ticket. Nevertheless, the Telegraph mentioned Calhoun's name in connection with the tariff only once more before the election and only under the most imperative circumstances. In October, 1828, Niles' Register printed Calhoun's letter to Green and included an additional paragraph in which he took a most unconciliatory stand against the Tariff of 1828. The Carolinian had allegedly written that the Act of 1828 was unconstitutional and had urged Southerners to work for its repeal and the restoration of the rights of their states. Green denied the authenticity of such a paragraph and stated that Calhoun had never written or expressed these sentiments to him. Hezekiah Niles later printed a retraction, conceding the truth of Green's statement.³⁵

Throughout 1826 and 1827 Green had worked diligently to protect Calhoun's claim to the vice presidential nomination. He had defended his friend against administration attacks and successfully repelled the threat from Clinton. Green's labors had been effective; for by February, 1828, it had become obvious that the Carolinian would be Jackson's running mate. Only after the achievement of this aim, did the editor devote his columns almost exclusively to the cause of General Jackson, for the realization of Calhoun's ultimate aspirations for the presidency depended upon the election of Old Hickory in 1828.

Clearly Green's vigorous efforts were crucial in securing a pro-Calhoun consensus among Jacksonians and in helping the Carolinian to gain western support. But even more important was his influence as editor of the primary Jackson campaign organ. In this capacity he bombarded Jacksonian leaders and the electorate with pro-Calhoun propaganda. Considering the fact that the Telegraph had the widest circulation of any paper during the campaign, more than 20,00 subscribers in 1828, and the fact that the provincial Jacksonian presses often reprinted the Telegraph's editorials and articles, the extent of Green's influence far exceeded that of other editors of his day. At a time when the press was emerging as a powerful force in politics, Green's advocacy of Calhoun was of paramount value.³⁶

Craig M. Bennett, 31 Meeting Street, Charleston, S. C., 29401, seeks information on the family of Joseph Baker and his wife Mary, thought to be of St. Bartholomew's Parish. Mary Baker died June 1845. Their children, many listed in the records of the Independent Congregational Church of Charleston, were as follows: Mary Elizabeth who married Toomer (c. 1810), William H., John C., Ann Maria, Edward Bonneau, Robert Little (b. 1807, d. 1867) married Sarah Anna Brow, William, Thomas and Joseph. Joseph Baker in 1804 was reported as being a trustee of Trinity Methodist Church a carpenter with a fair amount of personal estate in Charleston. He was a nephew of Samuel Breed. He had a nephew Thomas Smith who was a minor in 1827. Robert Little Baker and Sarah Anna Brow had one daughter Sarah Harriet Baker, born February 18, 1839, who married John Bennett Bissell.

CMSgt Walter Alley Russell, 7449A Ohana Nui Cr, Hicham AFB, Hi, 96818, requests information on Matthew Russell, Sr., who migrated to Penn. from Ireland prior to 1761. Information desired on port and date of departure, port and date of arrival, name of ship, and name of any accompanying relatives. Would like to correspond with any descendants and/or genealogists researching Matthew Russell's lineage.

Mrs. George Willard, 1200 Elizabeth Road, Wilson, N. C. 27893, wishes information about Walter Willard (1797-1850s) and wife Mary Ann (Durant?) (1790s-1840s) who lived in Georgetown, S. C. from about 1820 until death. Also would welcome data regarding their relatives and descendants.
